European stocks rose on temporary tariff reprieve

US stock and Treasury markets were closed on Monday for Memorial Day.

European stock markets rose on Monday after US President Trump extended the deadline for the European Union to face higher tariffs. The Euro Stoxx 50 closed 1.3% higher. The German DAX and the French CAC rose 1.7% and 1.2%, respectively. The UK market was closed for a public holiday.

European government bonds edged slightly higher, as market focus turned to comments by ECB officials and EU-US trade negotiations. 10-year German bund yields edged 1bp lower to 2.56%, while 10-year French bond yields fell 2bp to 3.24%.

Asia stock markets traded mixed on Monday. Japan's Nikkei 225 rallied 1.0% and Korea's Kospi surged 2.0% on hopes of softer US trade policies after the EU tariff delay. Hong Kong's Hang Seng dropped 1.4%, led by losses in shares of EV makers and online platform operators, while China's Shanghai Composite ended almost flat. Elsewhere, India's Sensex rose 0.6%.

Crude oil prices fluctuated on Monday, as investors weighted hopes of easing US-EU tariff tensions and the expectation for an increase in OPEC+ supply. Brent crude for July settlement closed little changed at USD64.7 a barrel.

Investment in any market may be extremely volatile and subject to sudden fluctuations of varying magnitude due to a wide range of direct and indirect influences. Such characteristics can lead to considerable losses being incurred by those exposed to such markets. If an investment is withdrawn or terminated early, it may not return the full amount invested. In addition to the normal risks associated with investing, international investments may involve risk of capital loss from unfavourable fluctuations in currency values, from differences in generally accepted accounting principles or from economic or political instability in certain jurisdictions. Narrowly focused investments and smaller companies typically exhibit higher volatility. There is no guarantee of positive trading performance. Investments in emerging markets are by their nature higher risk and potentially more volatile than those inherent in some established markets. Economies in emerging markets generally are heavily dependent upon international trade and, accordingly, have been and may continue to be affected adversely by trade barriers, exchange controls, managed adjustments in relative currency values and other protectionist measures imposed or negotiated by the countries with which they trade. These economies also have been and may continue to be affected adversely by economic conditions in the countries in which they trade. Mutual fund investments are subject to market risks. You should read all scheme related documents carefully.
